

European Documentation Centre (EDC)

Function and tasks

The European Documentation Centre (EDC) is part of a worldwide information network, set up by the European Commission since the early 1960s. Today there are more than 350 documentation centres in EU Member States. Furthermore, EDCs called "EUi Centres" were established in Candidate and other countries all over the world. The purpose of the network is to support academic study and research on European integration. The EDC is also open to the interested public.

In 1965 the University of Mannheim signed a convention establishing the European Documentation Centre. In 2003 the centre was integrated into the University Library. The Mannheim It is working as a comprehensive documentation centre covering all EU policy areas.

Extensive information services on EU matters are available online, including the EDC online catalogue (EDC library stock) and more than 66,000 electronic documents.
