132nd plenary session, 5-6 December 2018

OPINION

The Single Market Programme

THE EUROPEAN COMMITTEE OF THE REGIONS

- welcomes the proposal to establish a new Programme for improving the functioning of the internal market;
- recognises that the internal market is one of the main successes of the EU but that it must continue to adapt in a rapidly changing environment characterised by digitalisation and globalisation. Notes that significant barriers to a properly functioning internal market remain with new obstacles emerging;
- welcomes the emphasis on strengthening support for the SME sector through this programme;
- recognises that there remains a serious problem with the enforcement of EU product rules with too many non-compliant products on the market. Suggests that there is an urgent need for clear branding and visibility and the avoidance of duplication in the plethora of instruments that exist or are proposed to ensure that citizens and businesses understand the applicable rules and their rights and obligations and also the channels that are open to them when they believe the rules are being infringed;
- supports the objective of improving the capability of national, regional and local authorities to better implement the current rules, but suggests that the complexity of procurement law can be a barrier to the greater participation of SMEs in public procurement;
- welcomes the commitment to continuous investment in the existing Internal Market Governance Tools; recommends much greater involvement by local and regional authorities in the implementation of these governance tools as a means of improving their functioning;
- requests further detail on the future role and ambition of the European Enterprise Network (EEN), given the challenges for SMEs and how it is proposed to adapt the network to meet these challenges in an age of digitalisation and globalisation so that it is better attuned to the needs of businesses and more aligned with supports provided by Member States;
- appreciates the recognition that citizens are particularly affected by the functioning of financial services markets and stresses the need for the Programme to effectively support consumer rights and awareness raising in this area.

Deirdre Forde (IE/EPP), Councillor, Cork County Council

It is therefore appropriate to establish a Programme for the internal market, competitiveness of enterprises, including micro, small and medium-sized enterprises, and European statistics (the 'Programme'). A modern internal market promotes competition and benefits consumers, businesses and employees. Making better use of the ever evolving internal market in services should help European businesses create jobs and grow across borders, offer wider choice of services at better prices, and maintain high standards for consumers and workers. To achieve this, the Programme should contribute to the removal of remaining barriers, and to ensure a regulatory framework that can accommodate new innovative business models.	A modern internal market is based on principles of fairness and transparency, which promotes competition and benefits consumers, businesses and employees. Making better use of the ever evolving internal market in services should help European businesses create jobs and grow across borders, offer wider choice of services at better prices, and maintain high standards for consumers and workers. To achieve this, the Programme should contribute to the better monitoring of internal market developments, including of the impact of new technologies and innovative business models, the identification and the removal of remaining barriers, and to ensure a regulatory framework that can accommodate new innovative business models, including social entrepreneurship .

Text proposed by the Commission	CoR amendment
Public procurement is used by public authorities to ensure value for public money spent and to contribute to a more innovative, sustainable, inclusive and competitive internal market. Directive 2014/23/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁴⁹, Directive 2014/24/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁵⁰ and Directive 2014/25/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁵¹ provide the legal framework for the integration and effective functioning of the public procurement markets representing 14% of Union's gross domestic product, to the benefit of public authorities, businesses as well as citizens, including consumers. The Programme should therefore support measures to ensure a wider uptake of strategic public procurement, the professionalisation of public buyers, improved access to procurement markets for SMEs, increase of transparency, integrity and better data, boosting the digital transformation of procurement and promotion of joint procurement, through strengthening a partnership approach with the Member States, improving data gathering and data analysis including through development of dedicated IT tools, supporting exchange of experiences and good practices, providing guidance, pursuing beneficial trade agreements, strengthening cooperation among national authorities and launching pilot projects.	Public procurement is used by public authorities to ensure value for public money spent and to contribute to a more innovative, sustainable, inclusive and competitive internal market. Reason

The reference to the "(pursuit) of beneficial trade agreements" is worded in an unclear manner and does not refer to the issue addressed here, i.e. public procurement.

In order to meet the objectives of the Programme and to facilitate the lives of citizens and businesses, high-quality user-centric public services need to be put in place. This implies that public administrations will need to start working in new ways, bring down silos between the different parts of their administrations, and to engage in the co-creation of these public services with citizens and businesses. Moreover, the continuous and steady increase of cross-border activities in the internal market requires provision of up-to-date information on the rights of businesses and citizens, but also information explaining the administrative formalities. In addition, provision of legal advice and helping to solve problems which occur at cross national level becomes essential. Furthermore, connecting national administrations in a simple and efficient manner as well as evaluating how the internal market works on the ground is necessary. The Programme should therefore support the following existing internal market governance tools: the Your Europe Portal which should be a backbone of the upcoming Single Digital Gateway, Your Europe Advice, SOLVIT, the Internal Market Information system and the Single Market Scoreboard in order to improve citizens' daily lives and businesses' ability to trade across borders.	In order to meet the objectives of the Programme and to facilitate the lives of citizens and businesses, high-quality user-centric public services need to be put in place. Reason
Efforts to enhance the use and effectiveness of internal market governance tools such as online portals targeted at citizens and businesses must be accompanied by efforts to raise awareness of their existence and availability. Awareness raising among local and regional authorities and their elected representatives should be central to these efforts given their role in dealing with and supporting businesses and citizens on a daily basis.

Text proposed by the Commission	CoR amendment
SMEs share common challenges that do not affect larger firms to the same extent to obtain finance, to find skilled work force, to alleviate administrative burden, to take-up creativity and innovation, to access markets and foster internationalisation activities. The Programme should address such market failures proportionally, while not unduly distorting competition in the internal market.	SMEs share common challenges that do not affect larger firms to the same extent to obtain finance, to find skilled work force, to alleviate administrative burden, to take-up creativity and innovation, to access markets and foster internationalisation activities. These challenges are particularly significant for SMEs based in rural and/or peripheral and outermost regions. The Programme should address such market failures proportionally, paying special attention to actions that benefit directly SMEs and enterprise networks, while not unduly distorting competition in the internal market.

Reason
While all SMEs face the challenges outlined in recital 23, SMEs based in rural and/or peripheral regions report greater challenges in finding skilled workers and in accessing the infrastructure such as broadband and other forms of connectivity which are required to take up innovation and to foster internationalisation activities.

Citizens are particularly affected by the functioning of financial services markets. 	for consumer rights in this area, including awareness of redress procedures where appropriate.

Reason
Efforts to enhance the participation of consumers and end users in policy-making for the financial sector are to be welcomed. However, given the potential for any abuse or mismanagement in the financial sector to impact on citizens' lives, the issue of awareness raising in this area of consumer protection should be given particular consideration.

The actions implemented under the predecessor programmes and budget lines have proven to be adequate and should be retained. The new actions introduced under the Programme aim to reinforce in particular the well-functioning internal market. Lists of indicative activities concerning specific objectives in the area of competitiveness, or specific activities stemming from regulatory requirements, like in the area of standardisation, food chain regulation and European statistics should also be included in the Programme. II. POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

1. welcomes the Commission's proposal to establish a new Single Market Programme for improving the functioning of the internal market for the period 2021-2027, aimed at strengthening its governance, supporting the competitiveness of SMEs, improving consumer protection and enforcement of consumer rights, promoting human, animal and plant health and animal welfare and ensuring an appropriate European statistical framework;
2. recognises that the internal market is one of the main successes of the EU but that it must continue to adapt in a rapidly changing environment characterised by digitalisation and globalisation. Notes that significant barriers to a properly functioning internal market remain with new obstacles emerging;
3. acknowledges the vital importance for the proper functioning of the internal market of providing citizens and businesses with information about their rights, public authorities with knowledge about how to apply the rules, and courts with the expertise and competence to enforce them; in this context, it is important that different countries' education systems incorporate basic knowledge about the EU to ensure that all younger citizens gradually become aware of their rights and can make better use of the advantages offered by the internal market;

4. highlights the continuous challenge facing SMEs in accessing finance, the ongoing administrative burden of doing business, the difficulties they face in seizing opportunities through internationalisation and their inability to sufficiently reap the benefits of the single market; this results in continued fragmentation and market anomalies in many sectors and regions at the expense of both businesses and consumers; welcomes the emphasis placed by the Commission on strengthening support for the SME sector through this programme;
5. recognises that the development of information tools and training programmes is of utmost importance for the proper functioning of the internal market and must be based on the robust data analysis, studies and evaluations that are carried out in close cooperation with the Member States and their competent authorities, including regional and local authorities;
6. acknowledges the broad scope of the programme and the aim to streamline efforts to promote better coordination in the management of the internal market, but notes that ensuring its effective coordination will be demanding from a governance point of view;
7. highlights the need for the programme to have the flexibility to respond quickly and proactively to any disturbance in the functioning of the internal market or disruption in trade for SMEs that could, for example, result from the possible adverse impacts of Brexit;

The Single Market

8. acknowledges that the single market is at the core of the EU's economic and political integration, consisting of 500 million consumers and 21 million businesses and supported by a substantial body of legislation guaranteeing the free movement of people, goods, capital and services throughout the EU and the wider European Economic Area¹;
9. recalls that the Union's internal market shall, according to article 3 of the Treaty on European Union, "work for the sustainable development of Europe based on balanced economic growth and price stability, a highly competitive social market economy, aiming at full employment and social progress, and a high level of protection and improvement of the quality of the environment. It shall promote scientific and technological advance";
10. acknowledges that the Commission's proposal complies with the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality;
11. Competition in the single market should contribute to the implementation of these objectives, i.a. by delivering the most economically advantageous price for consumers and enterprises, notably through, lower transactions costs and a larger market providing economies of scale, encouraging greater innovation and ensuring faster response to consumer needs in a fair level playing field while avoiding all forms of dumping. However, considers that the benefits of the single market need to be better communicated to citizens, businesses and other economic operators and recognises that local and regional authorities have an important role to play in communicating this important message;

12. recognises that the single market is an ongoing process and remains incomplete in important aspects and that a better functioning single market, and the removal of remaining trade barriers, mainly in the areas of the services sector and the Digital Single Market, would boost economic growth considerably;

Single Market in Services

13. acknowledges the Commission's efforts to further enhance the freedom to provide services in Europe, particularly in the context of the services package², as much work needs to be done as shown in the European Commission's Peer Review on the implementation of the Services Directive, which confirms that there are still too many obstacles, including restrictions on the right to establishment³. Considers at the same time that more regulatory clarity is needed at EU level in relation to services related to the collaborative economy;
14. considers it important that new programmes contribute to improving the functioning of the internal market in services and queries how the internal market tools can be deployed more effectively to ensure a more integrated services market;

Single Market in Goods

15. recognises that there remains a serious problem with the enforcement of EU product rules with too many non-compliant products on the market. Suggests that there is an urgent need for clear branding and visibility and the avoidance of duplication in the plethora of instruments that exist or are proposed to ensure that citizens and businesses understand the applicable rules and their rights and obligations and also the channels that are open to them when they believe the rules are being infringed;
16. notes that there are over 500 market surveillance authorities throughout Europe, many with resource constraints, and a low deterrence of infringements of current rules. Recommends that, in addition to increasing cooperation and ensuring better integrated networks, more direct funding needs to be allocated to these areas. Strongly recommends that National Competition Authorities be properly resourced and independent of government in order to carry out their work effectively, which must be ably supported by the justice system and courts whilst respecting the varying competencies of such authorities in the member states. This is an absolute necessity if the effective implementation of EU laws on the ground is to be achieved;

Standards

17. welcomes the Commission's continued commitment to the replacement of 28 national standards with one European standard. Also welcomes the greater use of IT systems and procedures to reduce the administrative burden and share information with stakeholders. Recommends that adequate steps be taken to ensure that SMEs are properly involved in the development of standards to ensure adequate transparency and avoid the possible dominance in the process by larger companies or structures;

Public Procurement

18. underlines that local and regional authorities have important responsibilities for implementing EU policies and legislation, including in the areas of consumer welfare (where they are close to the citizen) and public procurement;
19. supports the objective of improving the capability of national, regional and local authorities to better implement the current rules, but suggests that the complexity of procurement law can be a barrier to the greater participation of SMEs in the public procurement process;
20. stresses that it is important for the Commission to cooperate with national, regional and local authorities if the objective of a procurement market that is competitive, open and well-regulated is to be achieved. This is essential if public funds are to be put to best use;

Single Market Governance Tools

21. welcomes the Commission's commitment to continuous investment in the existing Internal Market Governance Tools, such as the Your Europe portal and the SOLVIT network; believes that more work is required to promote the use of these tools on the ground, among citizens, consumers and authorities at different levels, to improve online findability of these tools and strengthen their capacity to provide up-to-date information; recommends much greater involvement by local and regional authorities in the implementation of these governance tools as a means of improving their functioning; notes at the same time that improvements in the tools referred to should not give rise to financial and administrative burdens for local and regional authorities;

SMEs and Competitiveness

22. recognises that SMEs are the backbone of the European economy, representing 99% of all businesses in the EU and being responsible for creating over 85% of new jobs over the past 5 years, and that together with entrepreneurship they represent the key to economic growth, innovation and job creation. Supports calls for a stable EU framework post-2020 and for the greater involvement of local and regional authorities in supporting the business environment and developing public private partnerships⁴;

⁴ Opinion of the CoR – The future of the COSME programme beyond 2020: regional and local perspective (ECON-VI/027).

23. recognises that a key issue is to ensure that the various EU programmes complement, and not compete with, enterprise support measures available at Member State level. Therefore, strongly recommends that the support measures for SMEs under the Single Market Programme and those available from national and regional bodies be delivered through a One Stop Approach;
24. notes the proposal that the loan guarantee facility, which currently operates as part of the COSME Programme, should be allocated under the InvestEU Fund in the next funding period. In this context recommends the continued use of intermediaries who have a longstanding relationship with SMEs but is concerned that all Member States may not have the structures at national or regional level to allow access to the guarantee funds under InvestEU. SMEs could find it difficult to access the loan guarantee funds in InvestEU should intermediary bodies not have a substantial presence in all territories of the Member States and recommends that the European institutions work with States to ensure that SMEs can have access to this funding on equal terms in all Member States;
25. calls on the EU to ensure that there is an element of regional balance built into guarantee funds under the InvestEU initiative as this will be of special interest to local and regional authorities particularly those representing less favoured regions;
26. asks for greater clarification in relation to the budget that is allocated to the SME guarantee under the COSME programme and made available to the guarantee fund linked to the InvestEU programme and how it will support high risk SME financing especially in more remote and peripheral regions;
27. strongly emphasises the need for specific mention to be made of the Small Business Act, which remains an overarching framework for EU policy on SMEs. Its strategic guidelines should be taken into account when adopting annual work programmes providing support for SMEs. In this connection, considers it equally important to refer to the Network of SME Envoys, in view of its role in aligning all the policies at EU level that have an impact on SMEs. Stresses that the "Think Small First" principle, which ensures that SMEs' interests are taken into account at the very early stage of policy making, should apply to the Single Market Programme and all relevant programmes of the new Multiannual Financial Framework;
28. requests further detail on the future role and ambition of the European Enterprise Network (EEN), given the challenges for SMEs as set out by the Commission, and on how it is proposed to adapt the network to meet these challenges in an age of digitalisation and globalisation so that it is better attuned to the needs of businesses and more aligned with supports provided by Member States;
29. welcomes the continuation of what used to be referred to as the Erasmus for Young Entrepreneurs (EYE) programme, noting that its title has been changed to "mentoring scheme for new entrepreneurs" in view of its significant contribution to strengthening the business environment and encouraging an entrepreneurial mindset. Strongly supports the possibility of extending the geographical scope of the programme to provide increased opportunities for young entrepreneurs;

30. strongly supports the development of networks of entrepreneurial ecosystems and clusters in Europe, as previously stated by the CoR⁵; therefore welcomes the Commission's commitment to further advance the Joint Cluster Initiatives and support the development of joint activities and transnational partnership strategies, also providing the necessary linkages with the EU's digital innovation hubs;
31. points out that the question of easing access to finance for the broadest range of SMEs operating in different territories is of crucial importance and that local and regional authorities have a role to play in the dissemination of information and targeted communication to beneficiaries about different instruments and support schemes available for SMEs, in cooperation with the intermediary institutions;
32. recognises the additional challenges faced by SMEs based in rural areas, peripheral regions, and/or in regions facing demographic challenges, for example, in accessing skilled labour and the infrastructure such as broadband and other forms of connectivity, which are required to take up innovation and to foster internationalisation activities. Requests greater clarity from the Commission on how these significant challenges will be addressed by the programme;
33. recalls the commitment made by the European Commission to the outermost regions to take their businesses' special needs into account in future SME support schemes, so as to improve their competitiveness on international markets and support the process of their integration into the EU internal market;

Competition Policy

34. welcomes the Commission's continued commitment to ensuring fair competition in the internal market by investing in the tools and expertise to enable it to effectively enforce competition rules in the digital economy. More generally stresses the need for continuous and effective engagement between the Commission and national competition authorities;

Statistics

35. recognises the importance of the availability of high-quality statistics to underpin evidenced-based decision making, and questions the integration of the European Statistical Programme(ESP) into the Single Market Programme given the importance of the visibility and independence of the statistical programme. Notes that, at local and regional level, there is a lack of statistics of sufficient granularity and timeliness and calls on Eurostat in association with national statistical institutes to address this issue;
36. recommends that the future European Statistical Programme maintain its present legal form, i.e. that it be established through an individual, independent regulation;
37. is pleased to see that indicators on the regions, particularly the outermost regions, are included among the actions eligible for funding under the European Statistical Programme; in addition to providing information that is already available, calls for the collection of additional data and the design of new, more adequate indicators, that are more indicative of the circumstances of the outermost regions, to also be considered eligible for Programme funding;

Consumers, Consumer Protection and Food Policy

38. welcomes the commitment in the new programme to enforcing consumer rights and ensuring a high level of consumer protection, product safety, and assistance to consumers when they encounter problems. Notes that the tools set out in the programme will both alert consumers to dangerous products and provide online consumer centres to help citizens solve problems but suggests that effective and enhanced representation for consumers through adequate funding of independent bodies will strengthen the capacity of such bodies to engage effectively in single market issues affecting consumers, including access to justice;
39. appreciates the recognition that citizens are particularly affected by the functioning of financial services markets and stresses the need for the Programme to effectively support consumer rights and awareness raising in this area. Notes the commitment to continue to support the enhanced involvement of consumers in Union policy-making in financial services and measures to promote a better understanding of the financial sector. Calls on the Commission to continue to build on this work in cooperation with consumer organisations from across the EU;
40. furthermore, underlines the need to ensure adequate financing for consumer organisations so that they can effectively defend the interests of consumers and act as qualified entities within collective redress procedures. Draws attention to the fact that consumer organisations, especially in smaller Member States, are particularly concerned;
41. welcomes the introduction of a specific "Food strand" in the new Single Market Programme. As the largest manufacturing sector in the EU, the food and drink industry needs a strong, competitive and sustainable supply chain, underpinned by a stable regulatory framework and improved functioning of mutual recognition in non-harmonised areas;
42. reiterates its request for policy measures to stimulate and sustain the development of food production and consumption systems that support sustainable production practices, thus reducing the impact on the environment and enhancing food security with quality products at reasonable prices, as expressed in its previous opinions⁶; wishes to draw attention to the fact that food public procurement can be a catalyst for driving food production towards a more sustainable path; therefore recommends measures to facilitate the training of food public procurement officers and the creation of networks to support national, regional and local competent authorities;

respond to changing circumstances and improve delivery and execution; notes that this is primarily a matter of internal administrative coordination and it is unclear that a single programme approach will on its own generate the necessary synergies and cost savings;

44. notes that the budget lines contained in the programme cross a number of Directorates-General and queries how this will work in practice. Notes the objective of achieving flexibility of budget lines may prove difficult in practice as structures for this have not yet been defined;
45. highlights that there is a lack of transparency in the budget lines as in some cases administrative costs are clearly delineated and but not so in others. Proposes that a type of technical assistance budget should be more clearly set out so as to separate programming costs from those associated with delivering actual measures.
